

A relatively quiet day on markets

Equity markets continued to move higher on both sides of the Atlantic yesterday, amid relatively calm trading conditions. The euro Stoxx 50 recorded a modest 0.3% gain, while the S&P 500 rose by 2%, supported by some strong corporate earnings reports.

Meanwhile on bond markets, yields moved lower across the board. US Treasury and German Bund yields declined by 3-8bps, led lower by the front-end of the curves. At the same time, UK Gilt yields fell by 4-8bps, with the larger move concentrated in longer dated bonds.

On the data front, a somewhat sparse macro calendar likely contributed to the quieter price action on markets. The main release of note, the German Ifo surprised to the upside of the consensus, rising to 86.9 in April, compared to expectations for a deterioration to 85.2. Meantime in the US, the latest initial weekly jobless claims figure printed at 222k, matching the consensus forecast.

Currency-wise, the dollar and the yen were under some downward pressure yesterday. However, the moves were modest overall, and there was no obvious catalyst for the declines. Furthermore, the dollar recouped most of its losses overnight.

In level terms, this sees EUR/USD open this morning near the midpoint of the $1.13-1.14 range. GBP/USD is operating at the $1.33 threshold. Elsewhere, EUR/GBP is changing hands in the lower half of the 85-86p corridor. USD/JPY is up at the halfway mark of the ¥143-144 trading band.

Already this morning, UK retail sales data for March have been released. Sales rose by 0.4% in the month, well above expectations for a 0.4% contraction. Sterling has been a touch firmer in early trading following the release. The remainder of today's data calendar is light of any market moving releases.
