

Fed Chair Powell and UK Budget in focus

Investor sentiment was holding a cautious tone yesterday. The Euro Stoxx 50 declined by 0.4%. Meantime on Wall Street, the S&P 500 shed 1%. In terms of fixed income, yields moved lower across the board. US Treasury and German Bund yields fell by 4-8bps, while UK Gilt yields declined by 5-13bps.

On the data front, the US non-manufacturing ISM printed below the consensus, falling to 52.6 in February from 53.4 (and vs. 53.0 f'cast). Elsewhere, Eurozone producer price inflation stood at -8.6% in January, up from -10.1% previously. However, neither release had any major impact on currency markets.

Currency-wise, the price action was confined to narrow ranges once again yesterday. In a similar pattern to the day prior, sterling was holding a slightly firmer tone during the European session. However, the pound handed back some of these gains overnight.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/GBP opens at the midpoint of the 85-86p corridor. GBP/USD is changing hands up above the $1.27 threshold. Meantime, EUR/USD remains near the halfway mark of the $1.08-1.09 trading band.

Turning to the day ahead, the main focus of a busy macro schedule will be remarks from Fed Chair Powell in testimony to Congress. Investors will be paying attention for any guidance on the interest rate outlook. In terms of fiscal policy, the UK Spring Budget will garner some attention.

Data-wise, Eurozone retail sales (January) will feature. In the US, JOLTS job openings for January are due. However, barring any major surprises, the data are unlikely to impact currency markets.
