Mixed tone to investor sentiment

There was a mixed tone to investor sentiment yesterday, amid a relatively quiet day on financial markets. The Euro Stoxx 50 gained 0.3%. Meantime on Wall Street, the S&P 500 edged 0.2% lower. Elsewhere, oil prices rose by over 2%, with Brent crude moving above $84 per barrel.

In terms of fixed income, yields drifted higher across the board. US Treasury, German Bund and UK Gilt yields rose by 3-8bps, respectively. However, there were no obvious catalysts for the move. Meanwhile, on the currency front, the main FX pairs were confined to narrow trading ranges.

Indeed, a sparse data schedule likely contributed to the muted price action across asset classes yesterday. The only release of note, Eurozone industrial production printed below the consensus. Output contracted by 3.2% in January (vs. -1.5% f'cast), albeit this was largely due to volatility in the Irish data. In any case, the release had no major impact the euro.

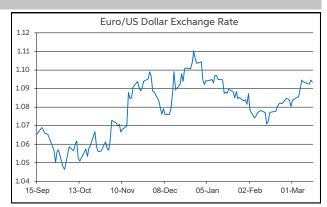

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD opens in the lower half of the $1.09-1.10 corridor. GBP/USD is operating in and around the $1.28 threshold. Elsewhere, EUR/GBP continues to change hands in the 85-86p range.

Today, the European macro-calendar is sparse once again. Meantime in the US, retail sales, PPI inflation and the latest initial jobless claims figures are due. Retail sales are projected to rebound, having declined in January. Meanwhile, PPI inflation is forecast to rise to +1.1% y/y in February, from +0.9% y/y. Initial jobless claims are expected to be 218k, little changed from the prior week's 217k total. However, the dollar impact from the data may be limited.
