Dollar strengthens further overnight

Investor sentiment continued to hold a cautious tone throughout yesterday, amid a slew of mixed economic data releases. On equity markets, the Euro Stoxx 50 finished flat for the day. Meantime on Wall Street, the S&P 500 recovered late on to inch 0.1% higher. In terms of fixed income, yields moved 2-5bps lower across the board, partly owing to a marginal softening in futures contracts.

US GDP contracted by 0.3% annualised in Q1 (vs. +0.3% f'cast). However, this was largely due to a very sharp rise in imports during the quarter, with underlying core demand remaining solid. Meanwhile, core-PCE inflation fell to 2.6% in March, in line with the consensus. In contrast, Eurozone GDP expanded by 0.4% in Q1 (vs. +0.2% f'cast), while measures of German and French flash HICP inflation for April, both printed a touch above expectations.

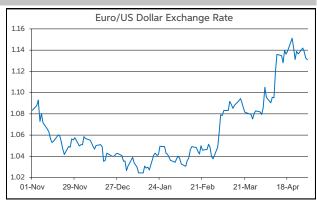

Against that backdrop, currency markets were confined to relatively narrow range throughout the European session. The dollar was holding a slightly firmer tone, while the euro and sterling were under some downward pressure. Overnight, the dollar has moved further into the ascendancy. Elsewhere, the yen has been on the back-foot, following the BoJ's decision to leave policy on hold as expected, last night. The central bank also revised lower its growth forecasts and provided little in the way of guidance on any future rate hikes.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD is operating back near the $1.13 mark. GBP/USD is changing hands down just below the $1.33 threshold. Meantime, USD/JPY is up above ¥144. EUR/GBP remains in and around the 85p handle.

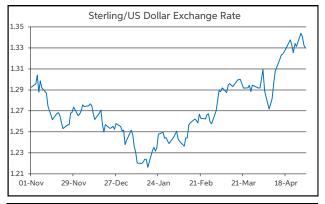

Turning to the day ahead, the macro calendar is somewhat quieter on both sides of the Atlantic. The main release of note will be the US manufacturing ISM for April. A slight deterioration is expected in the month. The latest US weekly initial jobless claims data are also due. Daniel Noonan, Economist, AIB
