

US CPI Inflation due today

There was a positive tone to investor sentiment yesterday, as the US and China agreed to reduce trade tariffs for 90-days following talks over the weekend. The US will reduce tariffs on most Chinese imports to 30%, while China will lower levies on US goods to 10%. Against this backdrop, equity markets rallied, market rate expectations firmed and sovereign bond yields moved higher. At the same time, the dollar was in the ascendancy on currency markets.

Overall, the Euro Stoxx 50 gained 1.6% yesterday, while the S&P 500 rose by 3.3%. Meantime, markets are now pricing in around two 25bps rate cuts in the US, UK and Eurozone between now and year-end. Previously, closer to three rate cuts was priced-in for all three regions. Amid the firming in rate expectations, benchmark sovereign yields moved 2-15bps higher across the board.

Currency-wise, as mentioned the dollar was on the front-foot. This was reflected by EUR/USD trading to a low of $1.1065. However, the euro moved off its lows before the close. Overall, the greenback gained around 1.0-1.5% against the euro and the yen yesterday. At the same time, sterling was holding a slightly firmer tone also.

In level terms, EUR/USD opens this morning back close to the $1.11 threshold, while USD/JPY is hovering up near ¥148 territory. GBP/USD is trading down at the $1.32 handle. Elsewhere, EUR/GBP is changing hands just above the 84p mark.

Already this morning, UK, labour market data have printed broadly in-line with the consensus. The unemployment rate rose to 4.5% while average earnings growth slowed to +5.5% y/y in March. However, the data have not impacted sterling so far in early trading. Later today, the main release of note will be on US CPI inflation. Expectations are for both the headline and the core rates to be unchanged at 2.4% and 2.8%, respectively, in April.
