

Dollar remains to the fore

European equities continued to fall sharply yesterday, with the Euro Stoxx 50 down by 2.3%. Meanwhile, the S&P 500 edged 0.3% lower. On bond markets, yields moved higher, with German Bund and UK Gilt yields rising by 3-7bps. At the same time, US Treasury yields climbed 4-10bps higher along the curve. The larger move in US yields coincided with a firming in US futures contracts. Markets now see rate cuts worth just 75bps in the US by the end of 2025.

Data-wise, there was a sparse macro-calendar for investors to digest. Of the limited releases to note, the German ZEW deteriorated to 7.4 in November (vs. 13.0 f'cast). Elsewhere, US small business optimism was little changed in November. However, neither release had a major impact on markets yesterday.

On the currency front, the dollar remained firmly in the ascendancy. At the same time, sterling was under some downward pressure. This was reflected in GBP/USD moving below the $1.28 threshold for the first time since August. Meanwhile, EUR/USD fell to a fresh YTD low of $1.0595.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD is changing hands just north of the $1.06 threshold. Meantime, GBP/USD is operating back below the midpoint of the $1.27-1.28 range. EUR/GBP is trading in the lower half of 83-84p.

Turning to the day ahead, the main highlight will be the October reading of US CPI inflation. The consensus is for the headline rate to rise to 2.6% from 2.4%, owing to unfavourable base effects. The core rate is projected to remain at 3.3% in the month, having shown some signs of stickiness recently. Elsewhere, remarks from a number of Fed officials will also garner attention.
